Design a circuit to compare two signals of the same frequency and to produce a voltage proportional to the phase difference between them.