

PRL today

Science journals are being transformed by the internet: now their role appears to be to validate research, not to disseminate it. How is PRL in particular adapting in this changing environment? How do its editors determine which papers to publish? What guidelines would be helpful to you as an author and a referee? Why should you submit your work to PRL? I plan to address these and related issues, including changes we have implemented in the journal over recent months.